Description

Situated in the Goleega subdivision, near the borders of the Cohutta Mountain Wilderness National Forest, on the noisy bank of Fightingtown Creek, this two-bedroom, two and a half bath rustic craftsman is sure to make an impression. Entering through the massive rock columns, constructed from authentic Tennessee fieldstone, you get the impression of bold and substantial construction, yet with the warmth of cozy, front porch living. The open concept main floor living room has a floor to ceiling stacked stone fireplace. The chef's kitchen offers unique features, including an island bar built from large beam pieces implemented in other portions of this home and a perfectly appointed eat-in dining nook. The laundry room and a half bath, with custom cabinetry, is positioned just off the kitchen. There are two levels of covered screen porches making good use of the peaceful sounds of the rushing waters of this pristine Georgia trout stream. The main level porch boasts an outdoor, two-sided, wood burning fireplace. The guest is on the main, complete with an en-suite bath. This guest bath vanity has handcrafted cabinets, dual vessel sinks, sitting makeup vanity, and oil rubbed bronze touches. Reclaimed wood from a mid-century schoolhouse was used to decorate over the private coffee bar located in the loft, just off the master suite. This master suite boasts a walkout deck and a travertine tiled shower in the en-suite.

Highlights

- 1,630 square feet
- 2 bedrooms, 2.5 bathrooms
- Master suite with built-in coffee bar and lounge area
- Guest bedroom with en-suite
- Custom cabinetry throughout with granite and wood countertops
- Fireplaces in the main living room and outdoor deck
- Screened decks on both levels
- Exceptional lighting throughout

Most of the interior woodwork was hand-crafted from local sawmills and lumber yards to create a sense of rustic charm. Detached two-car garage with bonus room completes the property.
